

Lady in the Water

Writer

Aaron Greene

Publisher

ScribeSlice 2013

A peaceful midnight stroll
The air cooling the mind
Moonlight making mysteries around the shadows
A gentle melody attracts my curiosity

The harmony gentle
Sweet
But alluring
Tempting

I hurry my pace
In search of this dream
Louder it gets
Faster I tread

Luna's light guides me
A clearing in the oaks
To a pristine lake
And an array of beauty

Their white gowns
Flowing as if underwater
Their feet barely grazing the surface
Their moves, liquid

The song was beyond measure
I stand in awe
Enrapt in the spectacle
Greater than a dream

One of them breaks off
She floats my way
Her face serene
Her arms welcoming

I reach out
Her hands softer than silk
I accept her embrace
And flow with her

We dance on the water
Her eyes never leaving mine
Nor mine, hers
As she takes me home

She kisses me
Her lips softer than her skin
And warm as the sun
Yet chilling, thrilling

As we descend
I care not
For I have her embrace
A memory of all memories

She lets me go
Drifts away and is gone
Leaving me at the bottom of the lake
Reaching for more

© Aaron Greene 2013

ScribeSlice